What does it mean to be the best? It's a weird question to ask, like a clumsy line in a movie when the coach needs to motivate the football team. For duPont REGISTRY, which celebrates its 39th anniversary with this issue, it has always meant being the best resource in America for buying and selling exotics and luxury cars.

This has been the magazine for people on all points on the enthusiast spectrum—for the dreamers, who pored over each page and every listing in a haze of automotive fantasy; for the collectors who are looking to add that one (or three, or five) missing cars to make the garage perfectly curated; and for the car dealers, who have always partnered closely with duPont REGISTRY to optimize their business.

This month, we are taking aim and firing at what, after all, it means to us when we say something is the best. We start out with our first-ever duPont REGISTRY Car of the Year award. There are many who claim they have the authority to crown the winner, but few with the heft to back it up. In the course of 39 years and counting, our magazine has been a gateway for nearly every potential contender.

How do we choose Car of the Year? We drive every great machine that's made its way onto the market, then we choose the one that rocked the marketplace with the most panache. Design, performance, technology, beauty, power, surprise, emotion—we mixed the components and came up with a clear winner, which you can read about on page 12.

We also took a good look at the best driving roads, the best seats, the coolest (and most expensive) options on the market. And we went very deep on one of our favorite innovations in the watch world: the mighty (and revolutionary) tourbillon, a 220-plus year old invention that almost literally turned time on its head.

As a brand, and a mighty force in the luxury car marketplace, we're nearly 40 years old. And yet somehow, everything still seems brand new.

Warm regards,

Mike Guy— Editor-in-Chief

For me, watching the V8 disappear from sports cars is like watching a beautiful coastline slowly erode. With each passing storm, less of the land remains to remind you why you loved it in the first place. The Ferrari's flat-plane crank F136 V8 — a howling marvel that lived inside some of Ferrari's best creations (especially the 458 Speciale) — is my first and perhaps last love. It captivated me and held me in its thrall. This is a very personal choice; there are V12 fanatics out there who would fight me to the death. But I will always adore the ripping of air achieved by Ferrari's V8, which Maranello first introduced in 1975, in the iconic 308 GTB.

The changing tides have brought the end, for now at least, of the V8. Now we must contend with a very clever sleight of hand that threatens to erase our childhood memories: The Ferrari 296 GTB — and its newest variant, the open-top GTS — is a plug-in-hybrid V6, and it is wonderful. One of the most beautiful Ferraris ever made, it has almost single-handedly redefined the powertrain of the midengine supercar in the modern age.

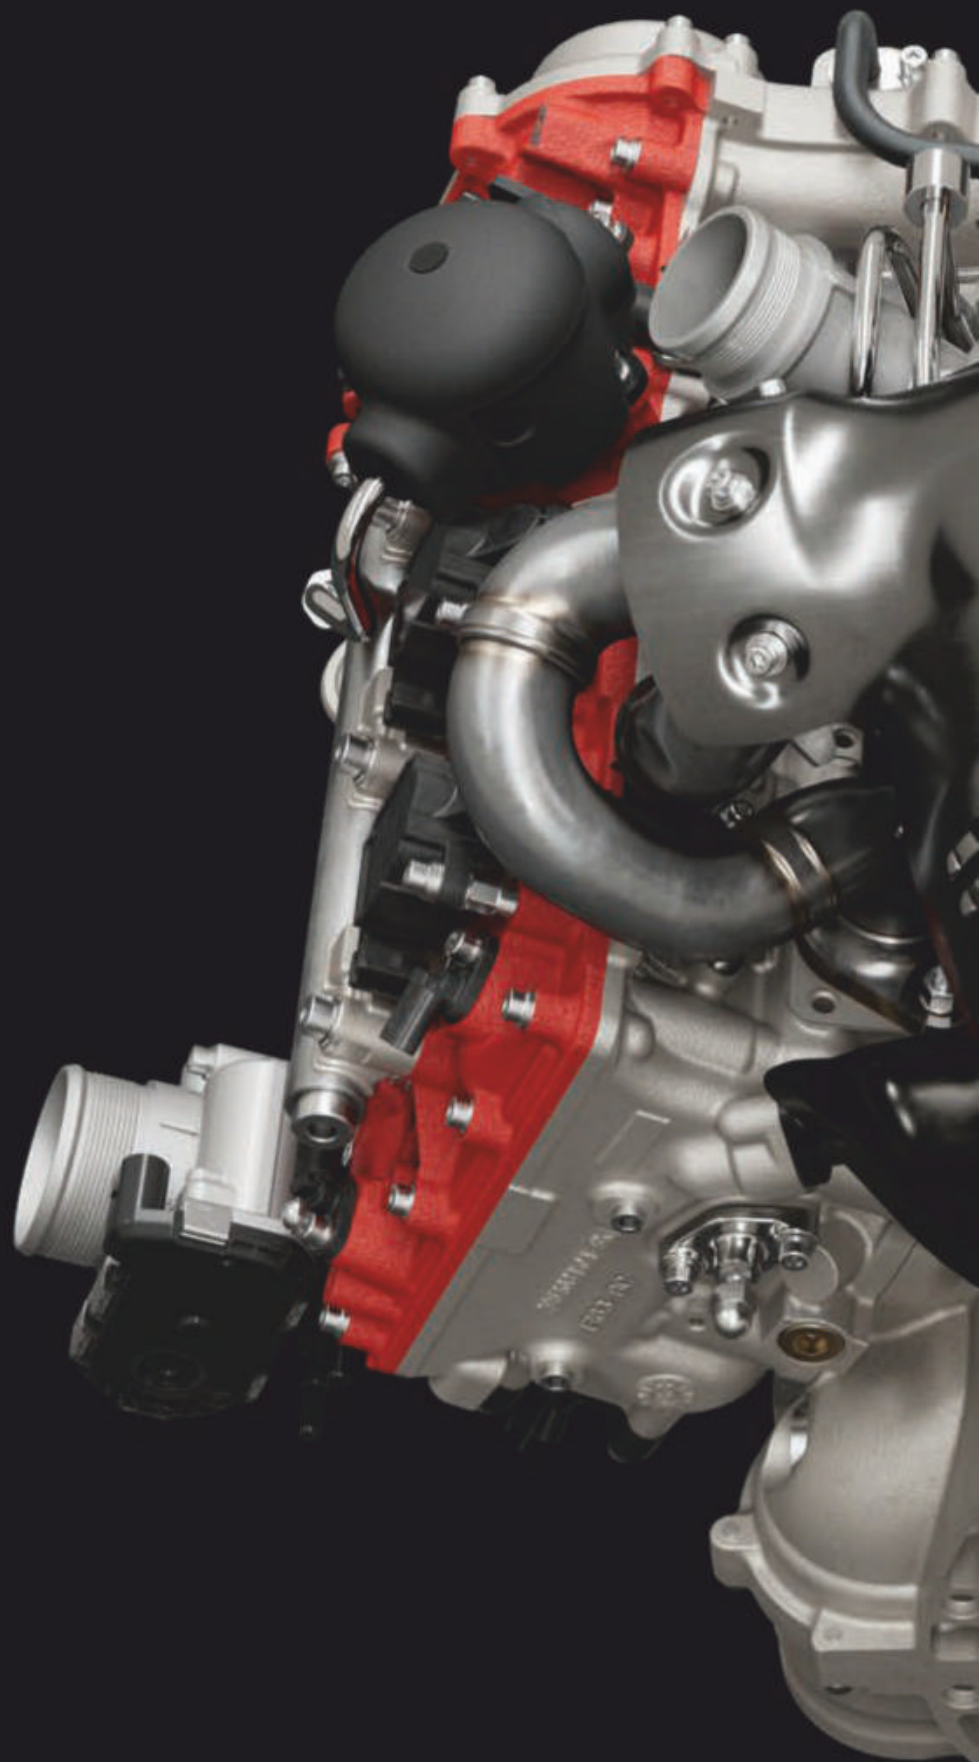

For that reason, and many more, the Ferrari 296 has earned duPont REGISTRY's first ever Car of the Year award.

Of course, it comes with a mighty hefty price tag of $500,300 — a significant markup from the $371,139 base price and a quantum leap above its direct successor, the V8-powered F8 Spider.

I loved the Ferrari 296 from the moment I first drove it two years ago in Italy. Why? It's objective sexiness doesn't hurt. As a coupe or convertible, the design has no expiration date. It fits seamlessly into Ferrari's hallowed continuum. Ferrari's designers claim its objective was to create authentic Italian forms, a silhouette drawn with a single pencil stroke.

The cockpit hunkers low, encapsulated by lithe fender flares. It is compact in form and expresses a darting speed even at a standstill. There are no extraneous notes, no interruptions in the design. Where the Corvette C8 Z06 looks like it was drawn by a bored teenager during geometry class, and McLaren nearly gets it with the similarly powered Artura, the Ferrari is the adult prodigy in the room.

The 296 emerged from the design shop of mad genius Flavio Manzoni. When he removed the roof, he created a hinge in the hardtop above the B-pillar. When you open the top, the roof folds flush over the engine, concealing the power plant while allowing proper dissipation of the V6's heat. It's an ingenious detail that compromises almost nothing.

Ferrari's design philosophy has always been about blending form and function in a way that mesmerizes all parties. The GTS is a stunning embodiment of this ethos. Its exterior is a masterpiece of elegant aerodynamics, with every curve and angle meticulously crafted to reduce drag and enhance downforce. The aggressive grille feeds air into the engine bay and cooling systems, while the sculpted sides and rear manipulate the airflow. The hardtop retracts in a mere 14 seconds.

Inside, the cockpit is a leather, carbon-fiber, and aluminum master class in driver-focused design: the manettino on the wheel is exactly where it should be, and the other controls are arrayed with simplicity and thought. This is a luxury: beautiful and not too busy.

On the road, the electric motor — in something like irony — is the secret sauce of the 296. Whipping open the throttle during a drive outside Maranello, the torque of the electric motor transforms the V6 from a welterweight into an 819-horsepower killer. It's hard not to love it. The GTB hits the 0 to 60 mph mark in only 2.4 seconds, and a quarter-mile in 9.7 seconds. Yes. You read that right. There is the speed, but there's also the steering response, the extraordinary braking, and an engine sound that doesn't feel like it's trying too hard to impress.

When the gas-powered engine kicks in, it's like a series of thunderclaps, like listening to Bonham burst into Page's guitar solo in "Over the Hills and Far Away." It's a clever concoction that maximizes the smaller configuration of the V6. Two 180,000-rpm turbos cram air into the firing chamber, and the pistons fire in the same order as Ferrari's naturally aspirated V12.

The convertible's design cleverly maintains the coupe's aerodynamic efficiency. No downforce is lost when the roof is down, allowing for speeds of up to 205 mph regardless of the roof's position. The design retains the iconic flying buttresses, now with added functionality for the fuel and charging ports. The active rear spoiler, a modern take on Ferrari's aerodynamic solutions, enhances downforce without increasing drag. The convertible's introduction adds 154 pounds to the curb weight, yet Ferrari has managed to make the GTS 50 percent more rigid than the F8 Spider.

Whether or not EVs take over the car market, whether or not the rising tide of change obliterates the cars that we love, what the Ferrari 296 has accomplished is timeless, and if it is indeed the future of the supercar, then I embrace it.

When deciding our Car of the Year, we had to pick something that checked off all of the boxes. From its exterior and interior design to how it drives, and everything in between, the 296 most definitely fits the bill.

BREAK THE MOLD

Our favorite innovations in cars today are the most unexpected

WORDS: Tyler Rampersaud

It's no secret that the automotive industry is undergoing a transformation. While the focus of that change centers around electrification — and many enthusiasts are mourning supercars as we knew them — This isn't the only evolution that's taking place.

As change sweeps the entire sector, manufacturers are harnessing the opportunity to experiment, trying things they've never done before and bringing entirely new concepts to the table.

In the supercar world, manufacturers are venturing off the beaten path. Two off-road-capable supercars that emerged in the last year defy the convention that supercars need be relegated to the tarmac. Those, of course, are the Porsche 911 Dakar and the Lamborghini Huracán Sterrato.

Named after the legendary Dakar Rally, the Porsche 911 Dakar celebrates the legacy of Porsche rally cars of the past. The Sterrato, meanwhile, is the realization of an intriguing concept car and arguably the spiritual successor to the iconic and zany LM002. Whether you want the trappings and classic silhouette of the 911 or the striking looks and V10 engine of the Huracán, both are incredible creations made for a whole new kind of driving fun.

Rather than sending a supercar off-road,

Los Angeles-based supercar manufacturer Czinger Vehicles unveiled the 21C Blackbird at Monterey Car Week in August 2023.

another legendary manufacturer decided to make an SUV with its signature on-road character. That was Ferrari, and the Prancing Horse shocked the world with the introduction of the Purosangue, its first “four-door four-seater.” With coach-style doors, power-adjustable rear seats, and other creature comforts, it promises a luxurious experience for everyone inside. And with a V12 engine, it has true Ferrari spirit and formidable performance.

Czinger Vehicles — known for the 21C, an ultra-high-tech hypercar built using cutting-edge technology including AI and 3D printing — revealed the latest variant of the hypercar this past Monterey Car Week: the Blackbird. Already inspired by aircraft with its inline seating, this specific model takes its cues from the legendary SR-71 Blackbird. With 1,350 horsepower and all 80 units sold out, it is undoubtedly special.

Another manufacturer known for pushing boundaries, Koenigsegg continues to make the impossible happen. While we've known about the Gemera for quite some time, the production-specification version of it was announced last year, and it combines luxurious amenities and a futuristic look with a hybrid powertrain capable of producing 1,400 horsepower. Better yet, a forthcoming V8-powered version will generate a mind-blowing 2,300 horsepower, which would break the production car world record.

Finally, the new but storied Automobili Pininfarina has defied convention with a twist on the all-electric Battista hypercar. Called the B95, the new model features a classically inspired, roofless Barchetta silhouette, bringing old-school thrill to the electric future. With only 10 being made, each of these stunning bespoke masterpieces is priced at an eye-watering $4.7 million, a price collectors are willing to pay to own one of the most unique creations on the market.

POWER PLAY

Expensive cars deserve expensive upgrades. Here are some of note.

WORDS: Jordan Aquistapace

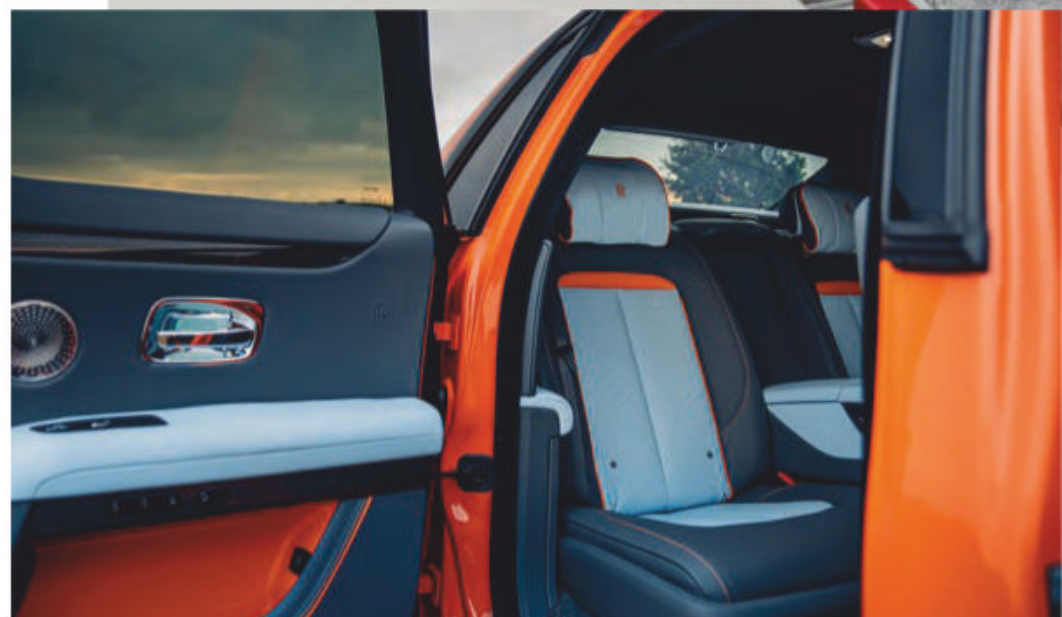

A certain breed of car enthusiast will spend a lifetime poring over the minutia of the perfect spec: paint finishes, cloth patterns, performance options to boost the horsepower by a fraction. The configuration process has evolved into a world with limitless possibilities, allowing owners to design their dream car exactly as they've always envisioned it.

Advancements in the industry have allowed buyers to get exactly what they want, but that comes at a cost. Whether through Porsche's Special Wishes program or Ferrari's Tailor Made division, clients are spending an equal amount on the car as they are on the additional options to create one-of-a-kind examples that differentiate themselves from other models on the road.

Paint choice seems to be a trending topic in the realm of high-end cars, and Porsche is one of the best in the game at offering customers an extensive list of colors through its Paint-to-Sample program. Venturing outside the traditional list of paint options for an additional fee, one owner chose to have their Porsche 911 GT2 RS painted in a $100,000 Urban Bamboo Chromaflair shade, setting a record as the highest MSRP 991-generation GT2 RS.

Sticking to the exterior, more desirable, lightweight wheel designs are making it harder to decline the upgrade when given the chance. In the case of the Ferrari Daytona SP3, the choice to go with the 20-inch forged diamond wheels will set you back an extra $8,099. As you venture into the upper echelon of the automotive world and cope with the costs, it's more than the right decision to have something truly unique to you.

Interiors have transformed from traditional cabins that favor functionality into driver-centric cockpits with luxurious amenities to match. If you're the type of person who enjoys a sky view from the comfort of your multimillion-dollar hypercar, Bugatti will add its Sky View roof option to any Chiron for an additional $62,000. And if sleek and subtle is more your style, Rolls-Royce features one of the largest selections of interior offerings with a bespoke service akin to designing the interior of a mansion. The Phantom EWB (Extended Wheel Base) stands out as the pinnacle of luxury, where comfort comes standard. Tailored upgrades to transform the rear with amenities that belong in a five-star hotel will set you back about $50,000.

It's inside a Rolls-Royce where you can find some of the most extravagant options possible.

COURTESY ROLLS-ROYCE MOTOR CARS, PORSCHE

Often, one of the last things buyers consider when buying a hypercar or ultra-luxury vehicle are performance upgrades, either because it comes with plenty of power from the factory or doesn't fall in the performance category. But when it comes to Koenigsegg and its lineup of seven-figure hypercars, Christian

Von Koenigsegg presents a couple of options for customers configuring their new Gemera. While the Mega-GT comes packed with a 2.0-liter twin-turbocharged I3 and an electric motor that generates 1,400 horsepower, the option for a 5.0-liter V8 and 2,300 horsepower has become available at a premium of $400,000. While cost is an undeniable factor, so too is the fear of missing out on a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity.

So whether we are comparing apples to apples, or Bugatti roofs to Ferrari sports wheels, the decision to take advantage of exclusive manufacturer upgrades lies in the hands of the owner. One thing that we can all agree on is, when the day finally comes, we will most definitely remember the moment that we made a dream car become a reality.

TAKE YOUR SEATS

We pay our respects to the unsung heroes behind every epic drive.

WORDS: Gabriel Vega Cortés

It's often the case when testing new super or ultra-luxury cars that headline-worthy figures such as horsepower outputs, acceleration stats, and any implementation of new tech are bound to grab the most attention. However, arguably as important as the powertrain or suspension are the seats. To highlight the industry's very best, we've compiled a short, unranked list of the favorites we've tested thus far.

1. FERRARI 296 GTB ASSETTO FIORANO

Ferrari's racing carbon fiber bucket seats are some of the most extreme we've ever tested. They're essentially glossy carbon shells with light layers of leather-trimmed padding. Maranello's most extreme chairs are firm and difficult to get in and out of, but they offer tremendous lateral support once sat behind the wheel. What sets these apart is how the thinness of their shells transmits chassis vibrations directly to the driver, making the experience in the cockpit all the more exciting.

2. PORSCHE 911 GTS

Available on various Porsche 911 variants as an optional extra, Stuttgart's carbon buckets offer excellent lateral support like those in the 296 but remain comfortable enough for longer drives. While ingress and egress can sometimes pose a challenge, they're form-fitting but wide enough to accommodate most body types. Additionally, they're styled similarly to those found in the 918 Spyder.

5. BENTLEY FLYING SPUR V8

Sport seats in a big Bentley sedan sound like a terrible idea on paper, but the British carmaker executes them very well. In last year's S V8 tester, they combined leather and faux-suede upholstery with a black base color contrasted by a bright red finish. While there's more lateral support than expected, they're still thick and very well-padded chairs. Massage functionality and heating and cooling features add to their appeal and versatility.

3. RANGE ROVER SPORT FIRST EDITION

Range Rover's 22-way heated and cooled seats surprised us in the Sport last year. Although the model is meant to be Rover's sportier take on a luxury off-roader, its standard seats are tremendously plush. It's as if you sink into them rather than sit on them. And thanks to their levels of adjustability, they make it easy to dial in the ideal driving position. One we'd choose over some competitors that cost up to twice as much.

4. ROLLS-ROYCE SPECTRE

Introduced for the Spectre, Rolls-Royce's all-new front seats are precisely what you'd expect to find in a car priced over $400,000. They're ultra-plush but, crucially, very wide, accommodating all body types. Coupled with the Spectre's ample cabin space, head, shoulder, and leg room are abundant. And like the Bentley's sports chairs, these come standard with massage, heating, and cooling settings. Thanks to Rolls-Royce's expanded options list, they're not only supremely comfortable, but also highly customizable.

1. TRANSFAGARASAN MOUNTAIN ROAD

Remember the Top Gear BBC episode where the guys went on that epic quest to find the perfect driving road? That adventure seared itself into the memory of pretty much every car enthusiast out there. The journey ultimately led them to Transfagarasan Highway, a mountain road in Romania. Now regarded as one of the best driving roads in the world, the ex-military mountain pass features more than 55 miles of twisting turns and straightaways that prove to be the ultimate testing ground for any supercar or hypercar. The Transfagarasan is like the Nürburgring's wild, scenic cousin, promising an adrenaline rush with a side of breathtaking views as you zigzag your way up to a dizzying 6,673 feet in the Romanian mountains.

— Jordan Aquistapace

2. TAIL OF THE DRAGON

Nestled near the Great Smoky Mountains between North Carolina and Tennessee is what is known by many to be one of the most famous driving roads in the United States, and for good reason. The Tail of the Dragon in Deals Gap is a bucket-list road for motorcycle and car enthusiasts because it is beautiful, undeveloped, and packs 318 curves into only 11 miles. With its idyllic location and one of the most engaging driving experiences you can get in a country known for vast interstates and expressways, the Tail of the Dragon is a gem of a driving road in the United States, and more than worth a road trip for any enthusiast to experience their car in a way that they couldn't virtually anywhere else in the country.

— Tyler Rampersaud

3. ROUTE 66: KINGMAN TO OATMAN

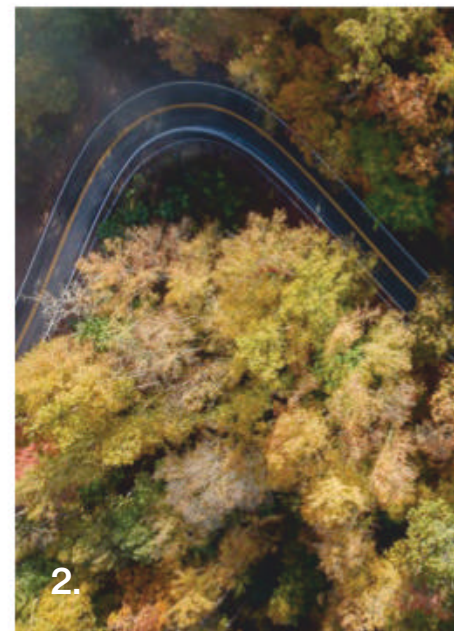

Born in Arizona, I was raised on dirt roads and long stretches of nothingness. That's why, when my parents took us on a family trip to Oatman, I fell in love with Route 66 and have reminisced on that trip ever since. Driving from Kingman to Oatman, in the rugged northwest corner of the Big Dry, you journey through gentle straights and curves for miles that then turn into tighter twists and turns as you ascend through the mountains. The best part? At the end of this trip is Oatman, where droves of burros (donkeys) roam through the old mining town.

— Ed Jones

4. ANGELES CREST HIGHWAY

Opened to the public in 1956, Angeles Crest Highway covers 66 miles of California's State Route 2. Just 30 minutes from downtown Los Angeles, the Crest comprises a seemingly endless blend of open sweepers and tight bends with plenty of straightaways in between. Although accessibility is a major driving force behind its popularity, what sets it apart is the complexity of its corners and its massive changes in elevation as you snake your way through the San Gabriel Mountains. It's the right road, no matter what car you choose to tackle it with.

— Gabriel Vega Cortés

THE ULTIMATE GETAWAY

This thrilling drive ventures through three states, promising epic sights and plenty of fun behind the wheel.

WORDS: Ed Jones

... Barber Motorsports Park is filled with activities for automotive enthusiasts to enjoy, such as the Barber Vintage Motorsports Museum.

Countless destinations across the United States appeal to lovers of the open road, but I'm here to present what could be considered one of the most idyllic trips for a discerning driver. It all takes place in the eastern portion of the United States, across three neighboring states: Alabama, Georgia, and Tennessee. Between these three states, four points of interest can be linked together via a road trip for an incredibly thrilling experience.

In Tennessee, Flatrock Motorsport Park is a new destination for track-day specialists. The main attractions are its two tracks: a competition track and a club track. Coming in at a length of 2.67 miles, the competition track connects to the club track, which is 3.5 miles, for a total track length of 5.9 exhilarating miles. Additionally, construction recently began on Flatrock Motorclub's luxurious garage lofts for those who want a permanent dwelling at this brand-new automotive destination.

The next stop is the famous Tail of the Dragon found at Deals Gap, along the Tennessee and North Carolina state line. Spanning 11 miles through some of the most beautiful mountains the Southeast has to offer, the Dragon is as intimidating as it is alluring. Don't let the beauty confuse you. You must remain incredibly aware of the road ahead when traveling along the Dragon, as its 318 curves seem to come at a moment's notice.

After what can be described as an intoxicating drive through the Tennessee mountains, it's time to drive to the one-and-only Michelin Raceway Road Atlanta. Home to a litany of professional racing events, Road Atlanta is and has been one of the top destinations for automotive enthusiasts in the Southeast. Even if you don't get a chance to drive on the track, visiting to attend one of the many events that take place there is well worth the drive.

A bit west of Road Atlanta is Barber Motorsports Park, an 880-acre facility in Birmingham, Alabama. Opened in 2003, the circuit consists of a 2.38-mile road course that throws drivers 17 turns courtesy of a design by Alan Wilson. While visiting the circuit, it's worth it to stop into the Barber Vintage Motorsports Museum to see an absurd amount of motorcycles — over 900 are displayed at any given moment.

This progressive road trip will leave any automotive enthusiast or natural-born driver begging to make it a yearly tradition. Not only is each pit stop exciting in its own right, but the drive connecting them is unforgettable as well.

ON THE MOVE

Lewis Hamilton awaits his next chapter at Scuderia Ferrari.

WORDS: Ed Jones
PHOTOGRAPHS: Motorsport Images

O

Over the years, Lewis Hamilton has cemented himself as a once-in-a-generation driver — not only a natural-born winner, but also as charismatic as they come. His rise from young karting prodigy to the most successful Formula 1 driver of our time is a story as epic as it is turbulent.

Hamilton's racing career began at the age of 8 behind the wheel of a go-kart. His gift was undeniable, prompting his father, Anthony, to work multiple jobs to fund his son's karting venture. It all paid off in 1998, when Hamilton was scouted by McLaren team principal Ron Dennis. After being scouted, Hamilton was signed to a young driver support program. Dennis told him that he would be racing in Formula 1 one day.

It didn't take long for Hamilton to ascend in the world of motorsport. He began his racing career in the Formula Renault U.K. series, where he clinched first place in 2003 after winning 10 of the 15 races. From there, he moved up to the Formula 3 Euro Series, taking first place in the 2005 season. The following year, Hamilton leveled up to GP2 and won another championship. (Are you starting to see the pattern here?)

Lewis Hamilton joined the Mercedes-AMG Petronas F1 Team in 2013 and has won six World Drivers' Championship titles in his tenure there. In 2025, he'll jump to Ferrari.

DRIVE

DURING HIS FIRST SEASON IN FORMULA 1, THE CRAZIEST THING HAPPENED: HE DIDN'T WIN. HOWEVER, HE DID TAKE SECOND PLACE IN THE DRIVER'S CHAMPIONSHIP, WHICH IS AN ABSURD FINISH FOR A ROOKIE.

With a bit of perfect timing, a driver spot opened up at McLaren's Formula 1 team directly after Hamilton's GP2 championship win, affording him the opportunity to enter the highest class of international open-wheel, single-seater racing. During his first season in Formula 1, the craziest thing happened: He didn't win. However, he did take second place in the driver's championship, which is an absurd finish for a rookie. It didn't take long for Hamilton to get his first driver's championship win, doing so in the 2008 season.

After a successful tenure with McLaren, Hamilton made the jump to Mercedes-AMG, where he dominated for a decade. After 11 seasons with the team — and six championship victories — the announcement that Hamilton will be making another move sent shockwaves through the paddock. Hamilton will join Ferrari for the 2025 season.

Hamilton won his first Formula 1 championship in 2008 while driving with McLaren. It was only his second season. He finished runner-up in his rookie year.

Even the driver he's replacing, Carlos Sainz, was surprised by the news. Still, the two will remain on their current teams for the 2024 season, giving us the chance to see if Hamilton can squeak out a final championship win (or at least a few podiums) with Mercedes for old-time's sake. That is, unless that pesky Max Verstappen has something to say about it. Or, who knows, maybe we'll see a new top contender this season.

No matter if Hamilton wins another championship, he has had a historic career that deserves to be celebrated. So much so that he was knighted in 2020 and may now be referred to as Sir Lewis Hamilton. He's in the company of driving legends Sir Stirling Moss, Sir Jackie Stewart, and Sir Jack Brabham. That's quite the group, but no one deserves it more than Hamilton.

SEASIDE SUPERCAR SHOWCASE RECAP

WORDS: Tyler Rampersaud

For car enthusiasts, there are few better ways to spend your weekends than at a car show, let alone one hosted right on the beach. duPont REGISTRY brought a luxury experience and automotive excellence to the beautiful setting of South Florida's Atlantic Coastline. The event was the Seaside Supercar Showcase, held on January 27, and if you didn't make it there, this is what you missed.

The venue was the Tideline Palm Beach Ocean Resort, providing a beautiful waterfront setting for some incredible supercars to be displayed, as well as luxurious amenities like a VIP lunch, a live painter, a DJ, and more.

Seventy-five gorgeous cars were displayed at the event, with over 200 people arriving to see them, ranging from modern high-performance machines to beautifully-preserved classics that stirred up nostalgia for decades passed.

One very special A-list guest at the show was none other than Mike Tyson, one of the greatest and most well-known heavyweight boxers of all time, who admired a beautiful A1GP Ferrari race car.

Along with being a remarkable Cars and Coffee event with sunshine, supercars, and stars, the Seaside Supercar Showcase served an important purpose as the soft launch of the new duPont REGISTRY Rally Club, which is set to bring duPont REGISTRY's iconic passion for supercars out onto the road, creating unforgettable adventures and experiences centered around pure automotive excellence. If you missed the Seaside Supercar Showcase, you certainly won't want to miss what duPont REGISTRY has in store soon.

Five years of research and development went into Hublot's MP-10. Among the largest watches the brand has ever developed, it draws aesthetic cues from modern architecture. Opposite: Creating the Master Ultra-Thin Tourbillon Enamel from Jaeger-LeCoultre.

Historically reserved for classic watches, the complicated two-centuries-old tourbillon invention continues to climb to new heights with top brands offering a diverse landscape of ultra-precision, ultra-alluring, and definitively superlative watches.

WORDS: Roberta Naas

TIME'S WHIRLWIND

In fine watchmaking, the tourbillon (French for “whirlwind”), represents not only a rare phenomenon, but also one of the most desired intricacies among collectors. Its allure lies in the continuously rotating escapement, a dual-purpose mechanism that enhances accuracy while elevating aesthetic appeal.

Cherished for its rarity, beauty, and captivating charm, the tourbillon escapement traces its origins back more than 220 years, yet it continues to be one of the most coveted features in watchmaking. Essentially, the mechanical tourbillon compensates for errors in timekeeping due to the effects of gravity on the watch when held in different positions.

The first tourbillon was invented by Abraham-Louis Breguet and patented in 1801; the first tourbillon escapement sold four years later. Breguet’s device is brilliant in its simplicity: to counter gravity-induced timing errors, the mechanism constantly rotates the balance wheel, balance spring and escapement while the movement is running, counter ing gravity-induced timing errors. Originally, the idea was developed for pocket watches, which predominantly remained in the same position inside a gentleman’s pocket.

The tourbillon stands as one of horology’s finest inventions, and one of the most important technological leaps forward in watchmaking. Today, advancements such as nanotechnology and precise micro-machining have somewhat simplified the production of the intricate components needed for increasingly precise tourbillons. But the tourbillon is the foundation.

Even as some argue that the tourbillon is obsolete, overtaken by technological advancements in regularity and isochronism, devoted watch enthusiasts, craftsmen, and brands maintain that this legendary innovation still enhances precision. In fact, today’s leading watch brands compete fiercely to create record-breaking timepieces utilizing tourbillons.

One of the most notable and distinctive aspects that set the tourbillon apart, aside from superior craftsmanship and precision, is its perpetual motion. Picture a choreographed dance of wheels and balances in continuous rotation on the watch dial — a captivating spectacle that resonates with the hearts and souls of watch aficionados.

Recognizing the allure of the tourbillon, top brands have refined their versions of the escapement, introducing features that enhance the appeal. These innovations include faster rotations (30 seconds instead of 60), larger viewing apertures, lighter weight cages for optimal spin, and three-dimensional masterpieces with raised spheres and multiple axles. Some even offer double- and triple-tourbillon watches.

However, crafting these tourbillon timepieces is no easy task, often requiring years of research and development. Today’s leading watch brands enlist the expertise of engineers and scientists to push the boundaries of innovation, aligning with the demands of the 21st century. Due to their intricate nature, tourbillon watches are typically produced in limited editions and come with hefty price tags, ranging from $80,000 to $1 million based on brand, materials, and embellishments.

The past six to eight months, for instance, witnessed a trail of groundbreaking tourbillon watches, leaving an indelible mark on the world of horology.

Recently, Hublot unveiled its revolutionary MP10 watch, which required five years in the research and development stages. It has no dial and instead boasts a roller-style time display. It has no hands, instead using arrows, and no oscillating weight — for watch lovers who understand this, it is mind-blowing. The weight (or rotor) is what typically winds a mechanical watch, but in this piece, Hublot has developed its own Tourbillon Weight Energy System, consisting of a pulley and linear weights, an inclined tourbillon, and a circular power reserve. The watch is futuristic in looks and technology.

From the inside out, the Ulysse Nardin Free Wheel Marquetry watch also showcases a revolutionary design thanks to the assembly of individual blue silicon plates to form a marquetry dial that acts as the backdrop for the movement parts of the UN-176 Manufacture caliber, showcased on the dial side. The flying tourbillon at 6 o'clock on the dial consists of 45 components alone and is equipped with the Ulysse Anchor Constant Escapement, a technical achievement. The anchor and balance spring are in silicon. The movement consists of 249 parts.

With a somewhat “classic” look on the top half of the watch, where a subsidiary dial showcases the time and offers a day/night indication, Glashütte Original's recently released Senator Chronometer Tourbillon Premiere serves as a prime example of how traditional watchmaking can blend with advanced mechanics, depth, and dimension for superb appeal. For this watch, the German brand showcases its patented Flyback Tourbillon with a laser-engraved movement visible from the front. The manual winding Caliber 58-06 consists of an impressive 572 parts, including 85 jewels, and is a certified chronometer, attesting to its endurance in extreme situations and ability to keep precise time. A small seconds indication appears on the tourbillon cage and a power reserve indicator displays how much of the 70 hours of power reserve is left.

For those who love a classic look, Jaeger-LeCoultre's recently released Master Ultra Thin Tourbillon Enamel that features a polished 18-karat pink gold 40-millimeter case that measures 12.13 millimeters in thickness and boasts a stunning blue Grand Feu enamel dial with a sunray guilloché pattern. But what clearly reminds the owner and onlooker that this is a contemporary piece is the oversized aperture at 6 o'clock and the deep-seated tourbillon escapement within. Powered by the mechanical Caliber 978, the watch's tourbillon escapement consists of 77 pieces, including a lightweight titanium cage. The watch is a study in sophistication and centuries of know-how.

FIFTY YEARS OF VANTAGE MOTORWORKS

As we at duPont REGISTRY celebrate 39 years of operation, we have to take some time to recognize those that have made our longevity a possibility. “Those” in question would be none other than the advertisers that have kept the pages printing and the cars selling.

One advertiser that holds a special place in duPont REGISTRY’s history is Vantage Motorworks, the iconic Miami dealership that specializes in the rarest and finest classic automobiles. If you’ve flipped through the pages of our magazine over the years, there is a 100% chance you’ve seen their inventory as they are not only our longest-running advertiser but also our very first.

More importantly, as we celebrate our 39th anniversary, Vantage Motorworks is celebrating its 50th, a milestone that deserves to be recognized. To celebrate, I spent time speaking with Richard Gorman, the founder, owner, and man behind the legacy that is Vantage Motorworks.

Being so prominent in the automotive marketplace and around the globe due to his world-class restoration services, I had to know what sparked his interest in cars. For him, it all started when he and his brother spent time in a taxi garage. Seeing all of the cars together with workers getting their hands dirty in the engine bays and smelling the mixture of oil with gasoline in the air was where it all began. He told me that’s how he wanted it to be, but he obviously traded the taxi cars for concours-winning automobiles.

Over the years, Richard has gained a library’s worth of knowledge not only about automobiles but also regarding the human experience when it comes to driving, buying and selling these cars. When speaking to Richard, it became clear that the most important aspect of the car ownership experience is the person themselves.

When I asked him questions like “What classic car would you recommend to a beginning classic car collector” or “What advice would you give to someone buying a classic car,” his answers always revolved around one thing: buy what you like. Instead of answers I’ve heard before such as “get something that’s appreciating in value” or “get what’s hot,” he was more interested in telling others to follow their hearts.

“Always buy what you like,” Richard told me. “People collect everything else based on what they like, such as baseball cards. It’s the same with classic cars. Get something you relate to or something that means something to you. Maybe you couldn't have the car before, but you can now, or maybe you experienced that car in your younger years and want to relive what it felt like. It's those things that are most important."

With answers like that, it's apparent that Richard is a true automotive enthusiast and he has nothing but love for the cars he sells. What's more, this love for the automobile itself translates into knowledge that he passes on to those who have stepped through the doors of Vantage Motorworks over the past 50 years.

However, he noted that during his years, it's not the talk that sells the car, and it's all about getting them behind the wheel and letting them experience the car for themselves. That makes sense considering you can read specs or a brochure all day, but if the car's driving experience doesn't check off all of your personal boxes, it's not the car for you.

"Look, just because I think a car is good doesn't mean anything," Richard said when I asked him what aspect of classic cars or what classic car, in general, would make them fall in love with these pieces of history. Again, it all goes back to the personal journey of collecting cars. You can have hundreds of automotive journalists write articles or film videos about how great a car is, but at the end of the day, it's all about what you want.

And what Richard has wanted all these years is to share his love for the automobile with the world. As he celebrates Vantage Motorwork's 50th anniversary, it's easy to say he has accomplished that goal. So, congratulations are in order for Richard Gorman and his wonderful team at Vantage Motorworks on five decades of success and passion.
